

CURRENT ISSUES
IN NORTH AMERICAN AND CULTURAL STUDIES

Academic Freedom in the United States

Dr. Hans-Jörg Tiede

American Association of University Professors,
Washington, D.C

Academic freedom is an essential precondition for higher education and, more generally, for democracy. Central to the American understanding of academic freedom is the concept of "extramural utterance," that is, professorial speech that occurs in the public sphere, which next to research, teaching, and participation in institutional governance counts as a co-equal element of academic freedom.

Dr. Tiede's lecture engages American conceptions of academic freedom, important historical academic freedom cases, and social science research on academic freedom. Central for his interrogation is how academic freedom has been understood in American culture and what role universities play in current culture wars.

In cooperation with nas.uni-bonn.de

Tuesday
April 18, 2023
6:00 c.t.-8:00 pm

Room B, IAAK
Regina-Pacis-Weg 5
53113 Bonn

Hans-Jörg Tiede is Director of Research at the American Association of University Professors.

He conducts survey research on academic freedom, tenure, and governance.

His publications focus on the history of the AAUP, the development of academic freedom, tenure, and governance in the United States.

NORTH AMERICAN STUDIES PROGRAM

UNIVERSITÄT  BONN